Lenders caught using false ads

30 claim bogus bank connections, 66 promote illegal acts

By Limb Jae-un
Staff Writer

The Financial Supervisory Service said yesterday in a release that it uncovered 30 private lenders in May that have posted false or exaggerated ads on the Internet.

The financial watchdog reported them to the Fair Trade Commission.

The lenders advertised that they have proxy agreements with major or savings banks, though such relationships did not exist.

The antitrust agency will examine the ads and decide on the degree of penalty.

Those releasing false or overstated ads are subject to a maximum of two years in prison or up to 150 million won ($161,861) in fines.

The financial authority also found that 66 private lenders issued advertisements that could encourage illegal activities.

Under the current law governing private lenders, however, these lenders cannot be punished.

The financial authority intends to reflect the necessary changes in a planned amendment to make them punishable.

"With the investigation, we realized that a number of private lenders ran ads that could promote illegal activities and disrupt the financial market," said Ahn Ung-hwan, a senior researcher at the regulator's nonbanking investigation department. "The amendment will include a clause that forbids ads that encourage illegal activities."

The 66 lenders advertised that they would provide loans to give borrowers proof of financial resources at banks.

The lenders then extended short-term loans and collected on them as soon as the borrower used the money to prove financial soundness.

The private lenders collected 10 percent of the loan as their fee after only three or four days.

Borrowers used the proof to qualify for admission to schools abroad or to start a business.

Under the current law, those who use a false bank balance statement are subject to up to five years in prison or 15 million won in fines.

LG, Hitachi file dueling U.S. lawsuits

Korea's LG Electronics Inc. said yesterday it has filed a lawsuit against Japanese rival Hitachi for allegedly violating its patents related to the production of plasma display panels, also known as PDPs.

In a statement released yesterday, LG Electronics said that it filed the suit with a Texas court in the United States on Sunday, asking for an injunction against Hitachi's alleged use of its seven PDP-related patents and for compensation from the Japanese flat panel maker.

The legal action comes after Hitachi filed a similar suit in April against the Korean company.

It also follows the failure of closed-door negotiations since 2005 over the sharing of PDP-related patents, according to LG Electronics.

LG Electronics officials said that both sides failed to find common ground over patent sharing as they saw "too much difference" over the value of the technologies involved.

"We hope that the legal dispute can be resolved out of court through a cross-licensing deal between the two companies," an LG Electronics spokesperson said.

He didn't disclose how much compensation LG is seeking.

Bill eases anti-monopoly guideline

A law governing holding companies may be eased to allow their subsidiaries to own diverse businesses.

Currently a holding company's subsidiary can only own another business related to its own.

The Fair Trade Commission said yesterday in a release that an amendment allowing these subsidiaries to own completely unrelated businesses has passed the National Policy Committee of the National Assembly.

The amendment also allows the completely unrelated business to own another business, as long as it is the sole owner.

If it passes the Legislation and Judiciary Committee and the Assembly, the new law will come into effect in October.

With the amendment, the antitrust agency will be able to ask for financial information to investigate companies mutually investing in each other, which is currently illegal. Now the agency can request financial information for insider trading. The abuse of monopolistic power will apply to businesses with 4 billion won ($4.3 million) in sales instead of the current 1 billion won.

If it passes committees and the National Assembly, the law will take effect in October.

FTC's chairman Kwon Oh-seung said recently that the holding company structure serves as a better alternative to the circular shareholding structure currently prevalent among Korean conglomerates.

SK Group Chairman Chey Tae-won said in a recent message to employees that the business group's adoption of a holding company structure marks the first step toward more advanced corporate governance.

SK's Chey said in the June edition of his group's monthly house journal, "The holding company structure will lay a blueprint for the group's future."

SK announced in late May that it would split its oil-refining unit, SK Corp., into holding and operating companies starting in July, in a measure to simplify corporate structure and improve management efficiency.

Other conglomerates that may follow in the footsteps of SK are Doosan, CJ and Hanjin Heavy Industries & Construction. jbiz91@joongang.co.kr

Daewoo asks China to loosen rules

Daewoo Shipbuilding & Marine Engineering Co., the world's third-largest shipbuilder, said it may add to a $100 million investment in a factory in China if the government eases restrictions on foreign ownership.

The shipbuilder remains open to turning a parts plant in China into a full shipyard if the limits are relaxed, Ahn Wook-hyun, a spokesman for Seoul-based Daewoo Shipbuilding, said yesterday by telephone. He was confirming comments by Nam Sang-tae, the company's president, at a ceremony in Yentai, China, on June 15 to mark the completion of the plant.

The Chinese government prevents foreigners from holding a controlling stake in a shipyard. Daewoo Shipbuilding has spent $100 million since 2005 to build the Yentai plant, which makes modules known as blocks that are then assembled into vessels.

Separately, Daewoo Shipbuilding plans an initial public offering of stock in its yard in Romania if the factory's finances turn around sufficiently, Nam was cited by a local newspaper as saying at the Yentai ceremony. The listing exchange may be in Romania or London, according to Ahn.

The company has received $6.5 billion worth of contacts this year to June 4, more than half of this year's target of $11 billion.

Kospi pushes past 1,800 for first time in history

By Jung Ha-won
Staff Writer

Seoul's main stock bourse sailed into new territory, reaching above 1,800 points yesterday. The Kospi surged 34.62 points, or 2 percent, to end at 1,806.88 points, bolstered by robust purchases of local institutions and individual investors, who offset a massive selloff by foreign investors.

The market bellwether Samsung Electronics rose 2.6 percent to reach 589,000 won ($634), and Posco, the nation's second-largest listed firm, climbed 0.8 percent. Other major tech shares had a field day as Hynix Semiconductor rose 4.1 percent, and SK Telecom, the nation's top wireless operator, gained 1.9 percent. LG.Philips LCD climbed 1.8 percent.

Shares of major stock brokerage houses rallied as future expectations ran high amid the recent stock market rally and the upcoming legislation aimed to empower the stock brokerage industry. Daewoo Securities soared 10.7 percent, and Samsung Securities also surged 8.9 percent. Hyundai Securities leaped by the daily limit of 15 percent, while Woori Investment & Securities jumped 8.2 percent.

Shipbuilding shares rose after the industry received a flurry of plans to build new plants, and some of the firms' subsidiaries announced plans to go public. Hyundai Heavy Industries, Korea's largest shipbuilder by value, rose 1.9 percent, and Samsung Heavy Industries climbed 4.1 percent. Hanjin Heavy Industries Construction rose 4.8 percent after the company said it won a contract to build gas refineries for Hyundai Steel.

Trading volume was 607.2 million shares, worth 8.3 trillion won. Gainers beat losers, 552 to 249.

The tech-rich junior Kosdaq also rose to close at 818.11.

NHN, the operator of the nation's largest Internet portal, Naver, rose 0.7 percent, and Kium Securities advanced by the daily limit of 15 percent. Trading volume was 794.3 million shares, worth 3.2 trillion won. Advancers outpaced decliners, 697 to 245.
